(The Report of “Teleworking style” Practice)

This publication was a complete telework from the beginning to the end. Is it because of your example corona?

Nope, We, in other words, I and HP production engineer (at the same time, he is an editor who principally wrote original stories) already have. We already have done it there for 6 years until now. The reason is that we are too busy each other to take time, or we no made time to meet. So, I thought about teleworking this time, and I think that hoping or not, teleworking works will depend on our communication attitudes. In other words, we try to find out what we are trying to say and what we want to convey, our efforts to find ways to satisfy ourselves, and what we are trying to say. Isn't it possible to have mutual attitudes of listening and catching the true intention of the other person and the receptiveness of the mind? No matter how expensive and high-level equipment and systems are introduced in telework, which has become a hot topic these days, no effect can be obtained unless the above items are satisfied. For example, trying to dent your opponent through your nose, or not accepting what you say. If you try to hide yourself and try to avoid it, or if you take the other person's legs and turn them upside down, nothing will happen. However, if you think about it carefully, this is not limited to teleworking, but in the face-to-face meetings and direct meetings before teleworking before Corona became an essential item for future work. That should have been the case (In the meantime, what has become clear now is that there was little such positive and productive communication even before teleworking)

That has become apparent with the introduction of telework. The biggest problems and issues that this coronal affair has attached to us (regardless of country, rank, sex, age, occupation, relatives or others), people to people and people to environment, people to creatures, these “one to one” communication way or style should be found out, I think. My question correct or not?
