(uto-Q blog “If it will come true, both sides will get business benefit, but too far it is”)

Foreigners think,

Japanese so easily speak Japanese language which we, foreigners, think it so incredibly difficult? But oppositely, such a Japanese people, why no can speak English, which much easier than their language? In Junior hi-school (secondary school) term, although 3 years learning about English, Japanese every student.

“Under the such crisis, Corona, East Japan-great earthquake, no crying, no making noises, they can wait in line calmly, but faceless calmness?”

On the other hand, Japanese people think, why do foreigners can express their emotions so clearly?

And

” why can they say Yes or No straightly without a bow?”

And then

“Why don` t foreigners care about other person`s eyes surrounding them and standing alone greatly like a no concerning to their noises?”

But Japanese people no say this question as usual at public place.

However, while foreigners have a variety of questions about Japanese people,

But oppositely, Japanese have questions that seems to be focused below

“why can they hold(keep)a confident mind?”

If we can discuss and find out on each other's good points, on the other words, can collaborate each other, it will bring a great business benefit to all of us, both sides.

But Still The way is too far...
