(Uto Q Blog Cicada singing” Kanakana”)

On the morning of the first day of the rainy season, when I tried to go through the forest park by bicycle, I suddenly heard cicada singing in the back of the forest and surprised.

I wonder if it's a kanakana." Kanakana” is another name for “Higurashi” that means sings when a summer day falls. As usual when I heard the singing, the sun became dark and it became dim, and it gradually became cooler, and I felt something sad like "after the festival", but from now on I didn't guess to hear it from the morning when I had to make the mood uphill, so I felt a little depressed. "Why the rainy season is finally over, as if target focusing since this morning, it's been ringing, it's not an auspicious event." When I thought so, I became a little annoyed, because I heard that "Kanakanana" cry. When I listened to it without unavailability, I felt as if I was saying, "Really, Is it true? Is this true? Is that really okay?".

"You, why don't you think about why we started to ring a noticing bell at this time?"

With that said, I also felt that I was promoting something.
