(Never, too much over- cherish your children for you, and you children and for our society)
Let's stop the stroller in addition to "Onbu ni Dakko(=hold on your lap, hold in your arms in front of you)". The stroller weakens the legs and feet of the passing old-fashioned "Onbu ni Daiko".

The meaning of the legs here is mental independence and economic independence. Parents use strollers "Onbu ni Dakko", thinking that it is okay to do so either as they are asked by their children or when they care for their children. However, that often causes them to fail. Therefore, if you really think about your child's growth, you should stop the stroller at the passing "Onbu ni Dakko". When a child becomes accustomed to it, parents often have to accompany the child. In that case, the actions of the parents themselves may be bound throughout their lives. Therefore, after a certain year, it would be beneficial for parents, children, and society to benefit from the feeling of "Shishi Senjin no Tani"(=For growing up your child, To push them out into crisis), and dare to release an important child. We think.
